SCOPE AND SEQUENCE:

Rooted and Grounded

Scope:

In Christian circles we talk a lot about “walking with Christ,” but often the specifics of how to live out a walk with Him on a day-to-day basis appear vague to our students. The lessons in this Bible curriculum are designed to guide upper level high school students in the understanding and the disciplines of a daily walk with Jesus. Throughout the lessons, there is a strong emphasis on ‘being’—living in the knowledge that Christians are God’s beloved children—rather than ‘doing’ things to attempt to earn God’s love.

Inductive Bible study and discussion, journaling, Scripture memorization, and systematic review are combined to lead your student to a deeper understanding of who Christ is and how to build a relationship with Him. Thought provoking questions challenge students to ponder, apply, and make each life-lesson personal. The writing assignments help students synthesize the principles they’re learning.

These lessons include basic doctrines which are clearly explained for the high school student: Salvation by faith; eternal security; sanctification; the positional truths of redemption, reconciliation, regeneration, justification; and fellowship with God and with other believers.

A wide range of Scripture from both the Old and New Testament is used. There are eight units with two to four lessons in each unit. Each lesson introduces an unreached people group and asks for prayer for those people.

Sequence:

Our writing team prayerfully considered which Biblical principles are most basic in teaching young people a daily walk with Christ and which order would best enable the High School student to progress from precept to precept. For example, we felt the reading lesson on sanctification should be taught early in the curriculum as a foundational truth, the lesson on “Forgiving Others” is preceded by a lesson on “The Forgiveness of God,” as a basis for our ability to forgive others, etc.
